Machinery Here Soon
J. T. Holmes of the legal department of the cheese corporation was in Hope last week and appeared before the city council at which time the council voted to furnish the factory with adequate sewerage facilities.

At that time Mr. Holmes told members of the council that his company would send machinery here as quickly as a contract for a building was completed.

Mr. Holmes said that machinery would be sent here the latter part of March and that operations would be started as soon as possible.

Cash to Farmers
Establishing of the new Kraft factory will mean resumption of the monthly milk checks for Hempstead county farmers which this area enjoyed during 1929 and 1930 when the Kraft company was located here.

The whole-milk market created by the cheese factory will furnish an additional cash to farmers, allowing feedstuffs to be turned into milk for a monthly pay check.

Nine Billion May Be Spent by U. S. Next Fiscal Year

Figures Represent Greatest Outlay in Any Peace-Time Year

MORE JOBS ASKED

Business Firms Called Upon by President to Supply Employment

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Spending of more than nine billion dollars in the next fiscal year was indicated Thursday in a recasting of government financial figures and estimates.

If this sum should be spent, it will represent the greatest outlay in any peace-time year.

The expenditures for the present fiscal 12 months is estimated at about $7,645,000,000.

Congress Battle Seen
WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt Wednesday appealed directly to business to increase employment, declaring that upon it rested the responsibility as to whether the new $1,500,000,000 relief fund he asked of congress would be adequate.

In a special message asking that a lump sum deposit of a billion and a half be placed to the credit of WPA for the 1937 fiscal year—a request that brought promise of a major battle in congress—the chief executive placed special emphasis upon a call to industry to "organize a common effort" to provide more jobs.

"Only if industry fails to reduce substantially the number of those now out of work will another appropriations and further plans and policies be necessary," he said.

Declaring that about $1,600,000,000 would be available to add to the $1,500,000,000 he requested, Mr. Roosevelt presented this picture of the present relief situation: 5,300,000 families and unattached persons are in need of public assistance (3,800,000 on local and state rolls).

Even as his message was read in the senate and house signals were hoisted that a fight would be made to earmark the new fund for specific purposes.

Speaker Byrnes was one who foresaw a battle over earmarking. Senator Clark (D-Mo.) asserted he was "tired of signing blank checks." Senator McNary (R-Ore.), minority leader, said no appropriation should be made "without a bill of particulars."

Plan Attacked

Representative Snell, of New York, the Republican leader, termed the request "a last grab at the treasury before the election," and asserted "the demoralization of the federal relief work by special politics, incompetence, waste and futile boondoggling cannot be ignored longer by the congress."

From other Republican senators came cries of "politics" and "fraud." Some Democrats said the ythought the amount was too large, but generally they pledged their support to push it through congress.

Soon after the message was read, Senator Holt (D-WVa) arose in the senate and demanded a "thorough and searching" investigation of the Works Progress Administration.

He reiterated charges that "politics" control the WPA administration in West Virginia.

Hopkins' Statement

Hopkins during the day wrote all state administrators that "no person shall be employed or discharged on the ground of his support or non-support of any political organization." He added that no WPA worker was required to make any political contributions and that any employee who solicited such contributions would be discharged immediately.

In his long-awaited message, President Roosevelt asserted that at least 5,000,000 more persons were at work last December than in March, 1933.

He added:

"The trend of re-employment is upward. But this trend, at its present rate of progress, is inadequate. I propose, therefore, that we ask private business to extend its operations to absorb an increasing number of unemployed."

"Frankly, there is little evidence that large and small employers by individual and unco-ordinated action can absorb large numbers of new employees. A vigorous effort on a national scale is necessary by voluntary, concerted action of private industry."

Business Area of Smoky City Inundated

TOP—Water poured into this de luxe movie theater in Pittsburgh's downtown area as the flood rose to a depth of 18 feet in some places in the famous "Golden Triangle." Damage in the beautifully-decorated theaters and stores was especially heavy. Windows crashed in before the mighty impact of the surging waters. Occasional rowboats passed up and down the lagoons which had been busy streets a few hours before.

CENTER—Ravaged by flood, Johnstown, Pa., is shown here during the rush of Stony creek, as is the bottom of the picture the Haines Street bridge is standing firm against the rush of Stony creek, as is the DuPont Street bridge, extreme right rear. But as the flood surged through the business district at left, and the residence district at right, the Franklin Street bridge, shown center in the stream, was torn from its foundations.

BOTTOM—Shown in this airview is the downstream point of Pittsburgh's "Golden Triangle," which was inundated from two to 18 feet by the flood that raged through western Pennsylvania, exacting enormous toll of property and taking several lives. At the bottom of the picture is the point where the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers come together to form the Ohio. At the left is the Allegheny, with its Union bridge in foreground. At the right is the Monongahela, with its Point bridge.

Death, Ruin, Is Left in Wake of Johnstown Flood

Ohio River Sweeps Into West Virginia, Wheeling Under 10 Feet Water

DEATH LIST MOUNTS

Roosevelt Asks $3,000,000 for Red Cross Flood Relief

By the Associated Press
The toll of death pushed toward 100 Thursday in the most disastrous flood devastation in the history of the Eastern states.

The Ohio river plunged wildly down its broad valley, sweeping death and destruction before it.

The Ohio inundated Wheeling, West Virginia, and then roared over its banks to cover the business district of Wheeling with 10 feet of water and to submerge the populous Wheeling Island and to threaten dozens of towns with its angry crest.

The last list of dead, by the states, placed the toll at 76, but fears were held for dozens of other persons.

$3,000,000 Sought

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt issued a proclamation Thursday appealing for contributions of $3,000,000 to the American Red Cross for flood relief.

Sleep On Highways

JOHNSTOWN, Pa.—(AP)—Ten thousand bedraggled flood refugees crisscrossed to their homes in devastated Johnstown Thursday after passing a sleepless night in emergency shelters or on open highways.

The general return began despite warnings of some of the state troopers that residents stay away from their flood area homes until Thursday night.

Story of Misery

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—Nine hundred national guardsmen patrolled this city of 700,000 Wednesday night while residents watched rivers reach their crest and turned to new fears of possible food shortages, darkness, disease and pillage.

The waters reached the record-breaking level of 45 feet, 20 feet above flood stage, before they began to recede slowly. Weather observers said the slow drop would continue through the night although a new rain began.

Food profiteering, with prices soaring in the inundated areas, confronted Pittsburgh. Public Safety Director Thomas Dunn told Mayor William A. McNair of the rising prices and asked a proclamation to curb profits at the expense of the suffering.

"I'll sign the proclamation as soon as it reaches me," the mayor said.

The flood covered whole blocks of the famed "golden triangle" heart of the city's business district and hundreds of homes were filled with water. The list of homeless rose rapidly into the thousands.

The guardsmen went on duty in the "triangle" to prevent looting and lend aid to refugees.

Ohio Threatens

The biggest flood of history in this section was rolling on toward cities down the Ohio with misery yet to come from them. Wheeling, W. Va., expected 30,000 homeless by morning. The island, in the middle of the Ohio river, was under water and its 10,000 residents without shelter.

An emergency was declared there. Darkness shrouded all of the city as the last of three major power plants went dead.

Candles sold at a premium in every section.

Fires and explosions added to the burdens borne by the steel metropol.

At least 49 were hurt in the series of blasts and blazes.

There were five known or reported dead in Pittsburgh and a total of 27 reported to have perished throughout flood-ravaged Pennsylvania.

Help for the stricken was on the way. The federal government arranged for $1,000,000 for relief and the city council in emergency session appropriated a like sum.

The Red Cross took full charge of relief work.

A food shortage was imminent and many sections already were without adequate water supplies.

Transportation was paralyzed. Street cars and buses were stopped. There were no trains into the stations.

Water filled the first floors of dozens of great buildings in the golden triangle, and all the theaters in the Whiteaway district.

Telephone and telegraph communication were threatened although officials hoped to keep lines open.

A shortage of boats hampered rescuers in bringing out marooned residents, particularly in the populous north side district, where more families were trapped than in any other section.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Cow's milk, generally, has been found to agree with the tastes and stomachs of most persons. But cases sometimes turn up in which a child, or older person, cannot tolerate the fluid.

For these some substitute must be found, one as nearly equal as possible to cow's milk in food value. One of these substitutes is goat's milk. Another is soy bean milk. Both have been found quite satisfactory for infants and infants.

Goat's milk, when properly produced, is an exceedingly valuable food. For many years, it was believed that the milk of the goat was superior to that of the cow, as an infant's food. This idea probably sprang from the fact that there was less tuberculosis among goats than among cows.

But it is reasonable to believe that goats were herded together in states where cows have been tuberculosis would spread among them to about

Today's Health Question
Q—My son has been thin all his life. He is energetic and plays hard and long. Which can I do to make him gain weight?

A—Children require more food than do adults, because they need material for growth, as well as for the energy that is put out. If they use up excess energy, they will require still more food to gain weight.

The problem in the case of your boy would seem to be a matter of more rest and more food. You should remember, however, that not all human beings are built alike. Some come from families inclined to be thin and others from families inclined to be fat. This should be taken into account.

the same extent that it appears among cows. Furthermore, the goat suffers more frequently with malaria or undulant fever than does the cow.

You should remember that goat's milk is not a medicine, but a food. Goat's milk tends to form a slightly firmer coagulum, or solid, than does cow's milk. In proportion to its body weight, the goat produces about twice as much milk as does the cow.

Many persons dislike the taste of goat's milk, but there is no reason for a bad taste if the proper precautions are taken in milking.

Soy bean milk, as its name indicates, is a product prepared from the soy bean. It seems to be a satisfactory food in the diet of invalids. It can be furnished at a reasonable price and is gaining importance in nutrition in this country.

The soy bean, dried provides 74 per cent water, 23 per cent protein, 21 per cent fat and 2.6 per cent carbohydrate. It provides 1993 calories to the pound.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

If you like to curl up in a cozy chair and lose yourself for an evening hunting treasure in the South Seas (and who doesn't?), then you have a real treat in store for you in a new kind of treasure book, "They Found Gold."

I say "new" kind of treasure book because this fascinating series of yarns by A. Hyatt Verrill is based on fact. Verrill himself has hunted for more than one fabulous cache, buried on southern isles, under coral reefs, or in the steaming jungles of Central America. His book is a review of the world's famous treasure hunts, many of which are still being carried on.

He carries you to Cocos Island, to the lost temples of the Mayas, to treasure hunts in deep waters where a whole armada of Spanish galleons lie buried. The salvaging of the Laurotic and the Columbus is described in two exceptionally interesting chapters in his book. The treasure story of the Inca Princess is equally thrilling.

And when you have finished, you can turn to the back of this book for a compilation of the unrecovered treasures in America, and a few pertinent directions for the would-be treasure hunter.

You'll find most of the world's lost loot still is to be recovered; but Mr. Verrill warns that treasure-hunting is a hard and usually a hopeless task.

Published by Putnam, the book sells for $2.50.

The United States and Mexico are the two largest producers of silver in the world.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

It is pretty hard to teach children thrift when every copper in the pocket is precious. Many parents cannot give their children an allowance, however small. But has it ever occurred to us that this very experience teaches much in itself? In an atmosphere of forever scraping for nickels and dimes the child learns the real meaning of money.

I think it is the heedless family, the extravagant one and the let's-be-merry-today home where holes burn in every pocket, and small change is tossed about without reverence, that has a job ahead of it in teaching little Henry conservatism. Perhaps he doesn't know that his daddy does without lunch to buy cigars or his mother without new tea towels to buy lipstick. But he does see the cigarettes and the lipstick and to his small mind they are both foolish things.

Parents have the right to buy what they want and need, without the approval of the small fry, of course. But my point is that little folk may be slow in evaluating money as long as the other members of the family spend it for things they like to THINK foolish.

Allowance Plan Fails, Too
Actually, I have found that the theory of the weekly stipend for a child, say twenty-five cents, ten to put in his bank and fifteen to lay out on candy or movies, has not proved the wonder it promised. In some cases, yes. But money in the bank, abstract money, that is, doesn't seem to impress a boy or girl the way it should. It may rattle pleasantly and he may simply not be able to contain himself for joy when he hears he has almost enough to go in the big bank next Saturday. But mostly he is different. I think.

If the idea is consistently carried out to a pre-planned point, much good may result. This I concede. But after a month or two the paymaster may lose interest. Henry's bank is the last to get fed. Not only this, but when two and two won't make five for the milkman, his bank too often makes up the deficit.

If everything has worked out successfully and his china pig has had its regular rations, has not been turned out to pasture too often, or discharged his feed and is prized by his owner as a real treasure, I earnestly plead that Porky be allowed to continue as a real entity for good in Henry's life.

The value of the bank is indisputable when other things are favorable and work in conjunction. But the bank alone is not enough. There must be a general attitude of thrift in family life, and a seriousness about spending and saving. If Henry is to be a save-thrift instead of a spendthrift, why make him the goat and explain the virtue of keeping an ace in the hole, or an umbrella for a wet day, when the rest of the family never thinks of putting a dime away?

HOLLYWOOD—Short takes: Irving Thalberg has a fireplace in his office. The Marx brothers, waiting for him there, grew restive and hungry, sent out for frankfurters, buns, and marshmallows, and were toasting their lunch when the big M-G-M finally returned.

After nearly a year of preparation, they've started filming "Mary of Scotland," but without a Queen Elizabeth or a Bothwell. Fredric March will be available for the latter job, but an Elizabeth hasn't even been engaged. It may be Ina Claire.

Instead of going to all the trouble of joining the French Foreign Legion, a man seeking obscurity might as well enlist in the army of Twentieth Century-Fox. After "Professional Soldier," "Prisoner of Shark Island," "A Message to Garcia," "Under Two Flags," and "Zero Hour"—and with more militant subjects coming up—it seems there'll always be one kind of war going on there.

Every major studio will increase its output for 1936-37 to pre-depression proportions. And for development of new featured players and stars, it should be a season such as the industry never has seen.

If the movie companies were powerful enough they'd probably have horse racing banned in California. Business offices figure that the Santa Anita season which recently ended cost the studios more in wasted time than do the illnesses of employees. The truancy problem got so bad that detectives were kept at the track to check up on hirelings who should have been working.

You may not remember Anne

Schaeffer, who was one of the first real stars, and did more than 100 two-reelers for Vitaphone. She's an extra now. So is Peggy Montgomery, who as Baby Peggy was the Shirley Temple of her day.

Miss Temple, by the way, next will star in "Dimples." All her titles are descriptive of her, except the last, "Captain January." There were "Little Miss Marker," "The Little Colonel" and other big "Little" pictures. And "Bright Eyes" and "Curly Top."

Not so many weeks ago they were posting guards at the studio gates to tell Elaine Barrie that Mr. Barrymore was not receiving visitors. But it wasn't long before she and John were having lunch together. Mama, too. And now the studio has given her a screen test.

Dorothy Stone, who's really the best stepper of all the Stones, is taking makeup tests in preparation for her screen debut. You'll be hearing a lot of her husband, too—Charles Collins, the lead in Technicolor's "Dancing Pirate."

Patricia Ellis is doing all right for a young lady of 19. At least, she's supposed to be 19, and there's no use quibbling. Anywhere, she has just been assigned her 25th leading role in four years, in an item called "Murder in Sing Sing." When you saw her playing opposite Doug Fairbanks, Jr., in "Narrow Corner," she was supposed to be 17, but had a couple of years tacked on her age.

Alice Faye seems to have changed her mind about Hollywood. She used to go east at every opportunity and tell how dull it was living in talkie-town and being a star. Now she seldom goes to New York, and doesn't bid for sympathy either.

If you can believe the gossip, Grace Moore and Nelson Eddy are something less than friends. Which is too bad, because they're scheduled to make a picture together and will be obliged to sing a lot of torrid love songs.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
TOBY RYAN, 20, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store. She poses for a photograph to be used in a store advertisement and MARY HILLY, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face."

Toby goes to dinner with BILL BRANDT, who works in an advertising agency. A few days later Toby loses her job, due to the scheming of jealous MAURINE BELL, also employed in the jewelry department. Toby's efforts to find another job are fruitless. Then she meets MARY HILLY again. He sends her to BEN BLAKE, manager of a model agency. Blake tells her that in order to register as a model she must have photographs. Toby, lacking $25 to have the photographs made, says she has changed her mind.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VIII

BEN BLAKE said, "Do you mean you've changed your mind or you haven't the money?" Toby met his gaze. "I haven't the $25," she said. "Even if I had a job, a regular one—and I haven't—it would take months for me to save that much. I'll just have to forget about it. I'm sorry."

"Wait a minute," Blake interrupted. "Maybe we can do something about this."

"But, Mr. Blake—"

He did not seem to hear her. Picking up the telephone, he said to the operator, "Get Mary Hilly on the wire for me."

Toby exclaimed insistently, "Oh, I couldn't ask him—!" Blake raised one hand, silencing her. "You let me handle this," he said. "Sit down."

Toby obeyed. A minute later Blake was speaking into the telephone again. "Marty?" he said. "How'd you get on? Yes, I've been talking to her. She's here now." For several moments he listened, now and then making monosyllabic answers. Presently, he said, "Listen, Marty, are you doing that Worthingale job? You are? Well, here's what I was thinking about. How about using Miss Ryan on that job and, instead of paying her, let her have some of the photographs? Could you do that? Well, I thought—yes, sure. Yes. Wait a minute; I'll ask her."

Blake turned to Toby. "Marty says he can use you on a job this afternoon. He's willing to let you have some of the pictures instead of paying you. Is that all right?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. Blake!"

"Could you go over to his studio this afternoon?"

"I can go any time."

BLAKE spoke into the telephone again. "It's all right, Marty," he said. "She'll be there. What time do you want her? Four o'clock. Okay. Thanks, Marty. I'll be seeing you in a day or so. Yes—goodbye."

He put down the telephone, pushing it aside. "Well," he said, "that's that. Hilly will make the pictures and turn them over to me. Of course I can't promise that we're going to be able to get you work as a model. It all depends on how well you photograph. The pictures will be the test."

Toby said, "I don't know how to thank you—"

"Never mind about that," Blake cut in. "Wait until we see how those pictures turn out. Hilly wants you at his studio at four o'clock. He glanced at his wrist watch. 'You've a little time yet. Maybe there're some questions you want to ask about this business.'"

"There are," Toby admitted. "You see, I don't know anything about it at all."

"Well," Blake crossed one knee over the other and settled back

What Might Be Done

What might be done if men were wise—
What glorious deeds my suffering brother,
Would they unite
In love and right,
And cease their scorn for one another!
Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving kindness—
And knowledge pour
From shore to shore,
Light on the eyes of mental blindness—
The meanest wretch that ever trod,
The deepest sunk in guilt and sorrow,
Might stand erect
In self respect,
And share the teeming world tomorrow.
What might be done? This might be done
And more than this, my suffering brother—
More than the tongue
E'er said or sung,
If men were wise and loved each other.—Selected.

How It Feels to Actually Ride Star

Man Would Be Dodging Meteors for Dear Life, Says Writer

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(AP)—A man on the tiniest world would ride 1,000 miles a day, but probably would hide behind a rock, or stay on the back side of his whizzing abode.

This deduction is made from a study of the smallest "world" yet known, a little thing about as big as a mountain, which passed the earth at a distance of 1,200,000 miles, the closest approach of any star thus far recorded.

If the "star" man rode out on the "cowcatcher" of this celestial engine, comet dust would sooner or later bore him through like a sieve.

The number of these fine particles striking the earth's atmosphere daily is estimated by Dr. C. C. Wylie, University of Iowa astronomer, as a thousand billion a day.

But this tiniest star has no air to cushion the dust. There can be no air on the mountain world, because it is too small for the attraction of its gravitation to hold gas.

The traveler out on the "cowcatcher" would be whizzing ahead at about 10 miles a second. The oncoming dust particles would arrive with speeds of 10 up to 100 miles a second.

No one knows how big the telescopic meteors are, nor what such impacts would do to the human body. But even if the "mountainman" had a shield against them, there is another reason why he would stay on the back side of his planet.

That is the meteors which man can see with the naked eye, bits of stone or iron from the size of grains of sand up to many pounds. There are 24,000,000 of these striking earth's atmosphere daily, Dr. Wylie estimates.

One of them weighing even a few tons, with no cushioning air, might wreck the face of the flying mountain, or splatter it too much for safety of anyone on the forward side.

The "little mountain" is one of about 2,000 known planetoids, or asteroids. Most of them travel in orbits between Mars and Jupiter. The largest of them is Ceres, 485 miles in diameter, or one-fifth the size of the moon. The orbits of 1,365 of them are accurately plotted.

The "little mountain" is not likely to make any two circuits of its orbit in exactly the same path, for it is so small that it is "perturbed" by the attraction of the major planets it may pass, and there are at least four of them. Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars.

A perturbation permanently changes the mountain's course. The other three visitors are Eros, a piece of rock about 30 miles long, shaped like a dumbbell which comes within 17,000,000 miles of the earth on an unchanging orbit; the "Rheinnuth object," a planetoid about the size of Chicago, which was discovered in 1932 when it passed about 5,000,000 miles from the earth; and the "Delporte object," which comes within 7,000,000 miles.

England imports 75,000,000 cigars from Cuba annually.

Trader Hornsby's Deals Give Browns Better Baseball Club

Hottest Team in American Loop Late Last Year Looms as the 1936 Dark Horse—Hornsby a Smart Trader

Editor's Note: This is another of a series of stories on the big league training camps.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—Hornsby, the greatest manager in baseball, is training the orphan St. Louis Browns here. The vanguard of the Browns sat around a hotel lobby for two days before the manager arrived. It seems that no one thought of making reservations.

When Hornsby appeared, he immediately bowed out of the hotel where the little-wanted Browns were supposed to stop, and checked in elsewhere.

Anybody can buy the Browns for the price of the average minor league franchise. The club is owned by the Phil Ball estate, but it's tough to get money for ball players through a probate court.

Hornsby alone keeps the Browns in the American League.

The Rajah sold $100,000 worth of ball players last season and wound up with a better club than that with which he started.

He sold Buck Newsom to Washington for $40,000. He sent Bump Hadley to the same outfit for $20,000. He peddled Oscar Melillo to the Boston Red Sox for $10,000 and Outfielder Julius Solters. Solters promptly became an outstanding star.

Bested A's in Deal
Hornsby is the one trader to out-trade Connie Mack. He gave the Athletics George Blahodier, a broken down right-hander, for Pitcher Merritt Cain and Outfielder Ed Coleman. Cain did quite well and Coleman was a wow.

Then the Rajah gave Washington Allan Strange, an untied shortstop, for Lynn Lary, for whom the Yankees paid a fortune and whom they sold to the Boston Red Sox for $35,000.

A fine manager, Hornsby. He has the best of baseball sense.

Hornsby earned $500,000 in salary in baseball, and hasn't a dime to show for it today. But the baseball sense remains.

Hornsby's advance squad numbered about 30, with 19 regulars among them—including Pitcher Jay Paul and catcher, Earl Caldwell, Jack Knott, Howard Mills, Elton Walkup, Leroy Mahaffey, Emil Meola, and Al Thomas.

Other players on hand were Rollic Hemsley, Tommy Heath, Tommy Carey, Ed Coleman, Beau Bell, Mel Mazorra, Harold Warneck, and of course, the "Rajah" himself, looking very fit after his preliminary workout as a "professor" in Ray Doan's baseball school in Hot Springs.

The atmosphere was definitely optimistic, with the skipper confident that his outfit can pick up where it left off last season.

"The big 'if' is still the pitching," Hornsby said as he rolled up his sleeves. "I've a hunch we may get something pretty good in that department."

"We have Andrews, Knott, and Cain to start with, and I think we made a good deal in getting Mahaffey from the A's for the waiver price. On top of that, we've lined up a flock of youngsters—and you never can tell."

Praise for Hemsley
"We have a topnotch outfield with Solters, West, Coleman, Bell, and Pepper. Lary and Carey have given us an infield that doesn't take any back talk, and with Hemsley behind the bat, we've got the best catcher in either league for my money."

Hemsley, erstwhile bad boy of the majors, arrived in camp looking as fit as Kreischer's best fiddle, after a winter of woodchopping and hog calling on his recently acquired farm near Dixon, Mo.

Rollic was Mickey Cochrane's choice as catcher in the all-star game at Cleveland last year—a significant tribute to Hornsby's handling of a rather temperamental youngster. Hemsley is all business now and he has

THERE'S no guesswork about the value of concrete improvements. They have a real dollars and cents value in improving the health and productivity of your livestock... cutting down repair bills... making your farm a better place to live.

And there's no guesswork about your ability to make the needed improvements. All you need is a few sacks of cement, some boards, sand and gravel or stone. You'll be surprised to find how easy and cheap it is to work with concrete. Convenient, too. One job now; another next week or next month. And whatever you do will last a lifetime.

Look around, Mr. Farmer. Check your farm against this list of concrete farm improvements. Send it with coupon to us and we will mail you free of charge a mighty valuable 72-page book.

Cardinal Hurler Sees Easy Dispute Settlement If Dizzy Signs

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—If brother Jerome (not so dizzy) Dean talks turkey with Branch Rickey and signs his St. Louis Cardinal contract, Paul (Daffy) Dean has a hunch he'll sign, too.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

LUXURY AFLOAT

NEW YORK CITY, in the early summer of 1935, saw the arrival of what was the world's finest ocean liner—the Normandie. After only one year of uncontested supremacy on the high seas, this great French liner faces the challenge of England's champion, the Queen Mary.

But as it rides the seas, the Normandie remains a marvel of size and comfort. Built at a cost of $59,000,000, the huge ship is too long and too wide to pass through the Panama or the Suez canal. It is half again as large as Germany's crack liner, the Bremen, and a single round trip across the Atlantic is said to cost $250,000.

The gigantic size of the Normandie can be realized from the fact that a spacious play and Punch-and-Judy room fills the deck space within one of its two dummy funnels, while the other is occupied by a smoking room and cafe.

Taft's Son Looms as "Favorite Son"

Robert A. Taft Is Boomed by Ohio Republican Organization

By W. C. PETERSON
Associated Press Correspondent
CINCINNATI. — (AP) — The White House is a virtual stranger to a President's son whom the political winds conceivably might blow there in 1937.

Robert A. Taft, elder son of the late William Howard Taft, Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, was rarely in Washington during the four years his father occupied the White House.

Robert, now 47 years old, was a student at Yale university and Harvard during the Taft administration. Wanting to avoid emphasizing his position as son of the President, he refrained from visiting Washington except during vacations.

Although he had obtained his majority by the time his father vainly sought re-election in 1912, Robert took no active part in the campaign. His brother, Charles, seven years his junior, was only 15 at the time. The brothers now are members of the same Cincinnati law firm.

Helped Elect Hoover

Robert, after practicing law here for four years, became assistant counsel for the United States food administration in Washington. There he met

Herbert Hoover and in 1928 was a leading figure in the campaign that enrolled the Ohio Republican presidential delegation under the victorious Hoover banner.

His interest in enactment of a reform taxation program sought by Cincinnati associates induced Taft to seek election to the Ohio house of representatives. He served there six years, and drafted legislation to inaugurate an entire taxation program that featured a state budget law.

He served as Republican floor leader of the Ohio house in 1925 and as speaker in 1926, when he retired.

Five years later, however, Taft returned to the general assembly as a member of the senate in furtherance of his interest in passage of a taxation classification amendment.

Likes Golf and Farming
His hobbies—he says his interest in golf is great enough to warrant that title—are golf and farming. He cards between 80 and 90 in golf and considers that "pretty good for a politician."

With his wife and four boys, ranging in age from 11 to 20, Taft lives on a 40-acre country estate east of Cincinnati. There he raises fruit and vegetables.

His oldest son, William Howard Taft 3rd, is a junior in Yale, where the second son, Robert "Bob" Taft, 18, is a member of the freshman football and rowing teams. The two youngest boys, Lloyd Bowers, 13, and Horace Dwight, 11, live at home.

Robert Taft is the former Martha Wheaton Bowers, daughter of the late Lloyd Bowers, solicitor general in the Taft administration.

Light Heavyweight Title at Stake Here Thursday Night

LeRoy McQuirk, above, who successfully defended his world's light heavyweight championship title against Jack (Handsome) Moore at Little Rock Wednesday night, will wrestle Charley Carr of Shreveport here Thursday night at Fair Park arena in what has been advertised as a championship bout.

Carr, reputed to be a rough and tough grappler, will be making his first appearance in a Hope ring. McQuirk showed here last summer against Ken Hollis, the Red Scorpion.

Promoter Bert Mauldin announced that he had obtained the services of W. C. (Chick) Page, former Mississippi

A. & M. college middleweight boxing champion, to referee the feature event. Bill Summerville, former Henderson State college football star, will be the third man in the semi-final event.

The first bout opens at 8 p. m. with Billy Venable, a new comer to Hope fans, scheduled to take on Walter Miller. The latter wrestler took two straight falls here last week over Lon Cheney.

Promoter Mauldin said that he expected one of the largest crowds to ever witness a wrestling show here to be on hand Thursday night. The admission price will be 35 cents for any seat in the house.

Pine Bluff Man Collected Payments Mailed by Government

PINE BLUFF, Ark. — (AP) — Waiving indictment and pleading guilty to charges of forgery and false pretense, J. W. Morrow, former Works Progress Administration employee, was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary here Wednesday.

Circuit Judge T. G. Parham fixed his punishment at three years on the false pretense charge and four years on the forgery accusation. Basis for the two charges was an $87.50 check signed "J. W. Morrow."

Employed in the Works Progress Administration office here, Morrow was quitted by officers as admitting peculations totalling several thousand dollars over a period of months.

The authorities said he forged fictitious invoices and collected payments mailed out by the government under a "general delivery" address.

Two-Year-Old Little Rock Girl Is Fatally Burned

LITTLE ROCK. — (AP) — Trapped in a steel waste can full of blazing papers, Patricia Ann Douglas, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Douglas, Jr., was burned fatally here Wednesday.

The child died at a hospital a few hours after two theater employees, attracted by her screams, pulled her from the can and beat out the flames.

Jimmy Lee Kennedy, four, Patricia Ann's cousin, told them the little girl climbed into the can then set fire to the paper. He said he tried unsuccessfully to lift her out.

The men, Leroy Sims and A. J. Coley, said the can was used as a temporary receptacle for waste papers and not as an incinerator.

Florida Man Is Nailed to Cross

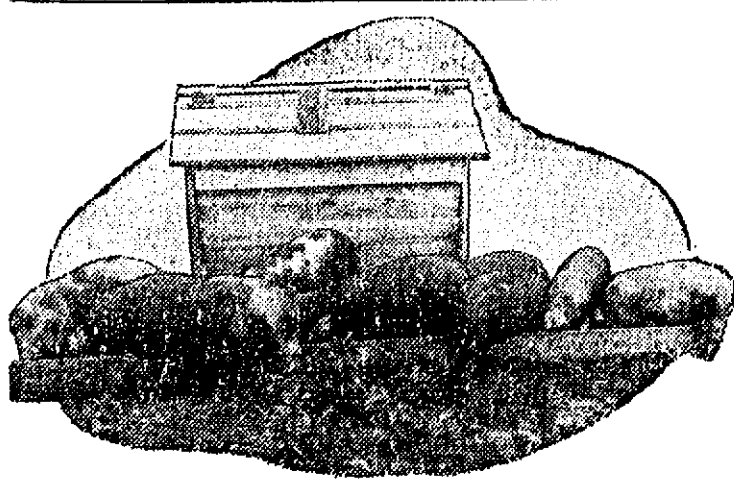

Crucified Carpenter Had Lips Sewn With Heavy Cord

OCALA, Fla. — (AP) — Spiked hand and foot to a heavy wooden cross and his lips sewed together, George Timmerman, 39-year-old unemployed carpenter, was freed Wednesday from a crucifixion which he laid to a group of unidentified men.

Timmerman, nailed to the rough cross by 30 penny nails, was released by police summoned to the wooded section of a city park by James White, a friend of Timmerman. White said he found the man after being attracted by his screams.

At a hospital, Timmerman, reported in great pain but in no danger, could shed no light on the affair. He said he had lost his job with a construction company working on the $145,000,000 Florida cross-state canal, and had sued the company because of an injury while working.

After the nails were removed from his hands and feet and the heavy twine cut from his lips, Timmerman was carried to a hospital where he and White were questioned. Police said they failed to uncover a clue.

FEED COTTONSEED MEAL

Make protein-rich cottonseed meal a regular ration for all your livestock. When self-fed with shelled corn, cottonseed meal is the ideally economical protein supplement to fatten pigs.

Remember, cottonseed meal is the product of your own cotton crop. It provides ideal balance for farm grains, hays, and pasture in the feeding of all classes of livestock. Two pounds of cottonseed meal per head each day will save four pounds of corn in the ration of your work stock.

Be sure your dairy cattle, beef cattle and sheep get the cottonseed meal THEY need.

Rangers Probe Road Accidents

23 Deaths in Arkansas Since January 1 to Be Investigated

LITTLE ROCK. — (AP) — State Ranger Superintendent Gray Albright said Wednesday that his department was making an investigation of all fatal accidents occurring in Arkansas since January 1 with the task about one-third completed.

Albright said 21 accidents involving 23 deaths had been investigated. Ten of the victims were pedestrians and in six cases the pedestrians were at fault, the reported stated.

Three of the fatal accidents were blamed on spiders, three on reckless drivers, one on an intoxicated driver and eight were listed as careless drivers.

Albright said that four of the careless drivers would have been prohibited from driving if Arkansas required a rigid investigation before drivers' licenses were issued.

BACKACHE

Getting Up Nights
You know that the kidneys when healthy filter out acids and poisons and thru the bladder discharge them from the body. When the kidneys don't do this properly there are a number of signals that warn you to be on your guard. Backache—getting up two or three times a night—puffiness may show under the eyes—often times the urine is scanty, colored and irritating. There may be rheumatic pains.

Whenever these symptoms start to bother you it is best to act quickly. If you will go to your druggist and ask for a 35 cent package of RAMON'S BROWNIE PILLS for the kidneys, you will be on the right track soon.

A LIGHT SMOKE OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

Luckies are less acid. For hundreds of years, tobaccos were selected—and gradations in flavor secured—by the roughest sort of rule of thumb methods. Hence, one of the most important innovations made by the Research Department was provision for chemical analysis of selected tobacco samples before purchase: the resulting reports offer the professional buyer an accurate guide and reinforce his expert judgment based on the senses of sight, smell, and touch. Thus extreme variations toward acidity or alkalinity are precluded by such selection and subsequent blending.

Luckies—A LIGHT SMOKE—of rich, ripe-bodied tobacco!

Luckies are less acid

Recent chemical tests show* that other popular brands have an excess of acidity over Lucky Strike of from 53% to 100%.
